

Sinclair Broadcasting is trying to get President Bush re-elected. From refusing to air the Nightline show that gave recognition to the fallen soldiers in Iraq, to this brazen use of the public's gift of the airwaves to show an anti-Kerry documentary a week before the election, it's clear that this company has it's own interests in mind, and not the public good. Their license to use the public airwaves should be revoked and given to those who will service the WHOLE community. This is a perfect example of the danger of continued media conglomeration and should be put to a stop.
